Welcome Manual to the Manual Archive

This manual is a welcome manual to accessing the entire archive that is hosted by the company you are currently working at.

We understand that the modern technology you are currently using is complicated so we have accommodated a simple guide in accessing the entire archive to complete all goals that we expect our highly trained staff to perform.

To start, enter any keyword in the titlebox above. We must remind you that while the system is new, it will not process requests that are multiple words; this means if any staff member wishes to find a manual that may use multiple letters, then they must instead use the optimal keyword that they can find by using logic which we expect all members at this company to have. If you are struggling to use logic or any sort of brain activity then we politely request for you to resign immediately.

After a while, the system will resume and will present all possible manuals that may have the solution you wish to seek. If the archive does not, then we apologise and you will need to create an alert towards the IT department which is situated in Building 2 on the 3rd floor.

Any other issues should be ignored otherwise productivity targets at the company will not be reached!

With lukewarm wishes,
The Manual Archive Head - Picasso
